The goal of this kitchen and adjoining sitting-area remodel was to add storage space, increase natural light, and update all the finishes. The floor's cement tiles are warm and soft underfoot — and earth-friendly, too, as they cure naturally. A wood-burning fireplace was switched to gas, to eliminate hydrocarbon emissions. The urge to demolish an entire wall was resisted; with one small structural change, light and storage were added without tearing down walls and filling a dumpster with landfill material. An existing closet became a large pantry by adding shelves and “Farmhouse” pantry doors.
